Workshop
“Defining the Essence of Palliative Care for Older People: Religions Together”

THE VISION

All older people affected by advanced chronic conditions and approaching the end of their lives have the right to receive palliative care that is focused on controlling symptoms, safeguarding dignity and enhancing quality of life and that also includes support for the family members and carers.

THE GOAL

Sharing the responsibility of caring for those suffering, isolated and vulnerable is not only a universal obligation of all religions but the expression of a moral duty in actively creating a caring society that reflects the fundamental qualities of compassion, respect and equality. For this reason, we are calling upon the global faiths to reaffirm that palliative care safeguards the dignity and best quality of life possible for all older people suffering from advanced chronic conditions and that it can minimize the sense of abandonment often experienced in these cases.

THE ISSUE

According to the United Nations (UN), between 1950-1955 and 2005-2010 the world's population life expectancy at birth grew from 48 to 68 years; an increase of 20 years. According to the WHO (Ref. Global Atlas, WHPCA), at least 69% of populations requiring palliative care are older persons. Therefore, it is essential for society to commit to ensuring that palliative care is available to all those in need. Palliative care for older people should be a mainstay of all healthcare systems.

THE WORKSHOP

Following the 'Religions Of The World Charter For Children Palliative Care', we would like to focus on another particularly vulnerable group: older people. Once again we will bring together some of the most prominent palliative care specialists, geriatricians, theologians of different faiths, human rights experts, global communicators and thought leaders, as well as patients and families from diverse cultures, faiths and walks of life to devise and endorse the Charter.

THE CHARTER

The 'Religions of The World Charter: Palliative Care for Older People' aims to strengthen the universal consensus on global access to palliative care for older people affected by advanced chronic conditions. Religious Leaders and faith-based organizations can play an important role in initiatives advocating the global diffusion of palliative care, particularly in low and middle-income countries where essential medicines are often not readily available. A scarcity of palliative care training and the lack of political support continue to be among the main causes of unnecessary suffering.

LA VISIONE

Tutte le persone anziane con malattie croniche o inguaribili che si avvicinano alla fase finale della loro vita hanno il diritto di ricevere le cure palliative incentrate sul controllo dei sintomi, la tutela della dignità e qualità di vita e il supporto alla famiglia.

L'OBBIETTIVO

La responsabilità di assistere le persone che soffrono, che sono isolate e vulnerabili, è un obbligo universale di tutte le religioni e l'espressione di un dovere morale di una società attenta ai valori fondamentali della compassione, del rispetto e dell'uguaglianza. Per questo motivo, ci appelliamo affinché le maggiori religioni del mondo si impegnino a sostenere le cure palliative come la risposta più adeguata per salvaguardare la dignità e la migliore qualità di vita possibile di tutte le persone anziane che soffrono di patologie croniche o inguaribili e per ridurre il senso di abbandono, spesso vissuto in questi casi.

IL PROBLEMA

Secondo le Nazioni Unite (ONU), l'aspettativa di vita alla nascita è cresciuta di 20 anni, da 48 negli anni 1950-1955, a 68 negli anni 2005-2010. Secondo l'OMS (Rif. Global Atlas, WHPCA), almeno il 69% della popolazione che necessita di cure palliative è costituito da persone anziane. Pertanto, è essenziale che la società si impegni per garantire che le cure palliative siano un diritto e quindi a disposizione di tutti coloro che ne hanno bisogno. Le cure palliative per le persone anziane dovrebbero essere inserite, a pieno titolo, in ogni sistema sanitario nazionale.

IL WORKSHOP

Dopo la "Carta delle Religioni per le Cure Palliative Pediatriche" è necessario porre l'attenzione su un altro gruppo assai numeroso e particolarmente vulnerabile: le persone anziane. Anche in questa occasione, alcuni tra i più importanti specialisti di cure palliative, geriatri, teologi di diverse fedi, esperti di diritti umani, comunicatori a livello mondiale, pazienti, volontari e famiglie provenienti da diverse culture, fedi ed esperienze, saranno riuniti in quattro tavoli di lavoro tematici per la stesura della Carta.

LA CARTA

La "Carta delle Religioni per le Cure Palliative per le Persone Anziane" dovrà rafforzare il consenso universale sulle cure palliative dedicate alle persone anziane in condizioni croniche o inguaribili. I leader religiosi e le organizzazioni religiose possono svolgere un ruolo importante, promuovendo a livello globale le cure palliative e in particolare nei paesi a basso e medio reddito, dove i farmaci essenziali, spesso, non sono disponibili. Purtroppo, la scarsità di informazione e formazione in cure palliative e la mancanza del sostegno politico continuano a essere le principali cause di sofferenze inutili.
